Let Freedom Fly with Hemp

Our founding fathers of America embraced hemp as part of our independence. George Washington's estate in Mount Vernon Virginia is maintained by a private foundation and began producing hemp in 2018 for the first time in two centuries. In collaboration with the University of Virginia hemp was sowed and harvested.

The idea began when a campaign was launched by a hemp patriot (Brian Walden) to illuminate the concept of the industrial uses of hemp.

Throughout George Washington's life he cultivated hemp for many industrial uses including: rope, sail canvas, and clothing with hopes of developing hemp as an alternative to tobacco. In 1793 the invention of "seine twine" was presented and today is used as a tightly twisted yarn used in fishing nets.

US flags were made from hemp as tradition until 1937 when the Federal Marihuana Tax Stamp criminalized all industrial strains of cannabis alongside its cousin with psychoactive effects. Our flags are now made with nylon.

The use of cannabis in the Summer months may help beat the summer heat with its various terpene and cannabinoid compounds which may help lower body temperatures caused by heat exposure. Some strains of cannabis contain menthol which contain cooling properties with topical benefits to help decrease body temperatures. The main component in cannabis (THC) is known to have many cooling properties with topical benefits to help decrease body temperatures. The main component in cannabis (THC) is known to have many cooling properties. THC interacts with the endocannabinoid system that may help regulate body temperatures.

The most common method for consuming cannabis is smoking or vaping. Alternative methods for consuming cannabis include edibles, topicals, tinctures, and RSO which may provide longer lasting benefits and are more discreet.

Beat the heat with Cannabis:

- Start Low & Go Slow
- Stay Hydrated
- Choose the Right Setting
- Be Mindful of the Heat
- Don't Drive Under the Influence
